

Reflection week 1

- what do I want to learn or understand better?

I want to understand the Scrum framework better. During the exercises we have had I have gotten some practical insight into the different sprint steps, but as of right now I feel there's room for improvement in working more organized with each step. For example, if we weren't happy with our increments, sometimes during the sprint retrospective we continued working on the project, instead of discussing how we could improve the process. These exercises were very early on, so looking forward, I think that once we understand the framework better, we will also work more organized and get more value for the future project by really performing each step of the sprint. I will review the powerpoints and browse the internet to learn more.

- how can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

I try to stay on track with the theory from the lectures so that I am able to participate in the group discussions and actively share my knowledge. I will also try to contribute to an environment where the team members feel they can ask anything and freely share any ideas and thoughts.

- what is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

In the workshop we had I tried to pay attention to the different Scrum terms and relate them to what had been talked about during the lecture. Since the framework is new to me, there are a lot of terms to get used to. For example the difference between the sprint review and retrospective seemed a bit unclear to me at first. By actively trying to fill in the gaps of what I do not understand it will be easier for me to keep track of the Scrum steps and pay attention to whether or not the framework is being followed effectively.

- what is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

I will make sure to finish the tasks that I am responsible for each sprint and also keep in touch with the group to stay updated on the progress and check if someone needs help.
